Curing of Seed Leaf Tobacco.

The conflicting opinions that exist on the subject of curing tobacco among farmers, says the Miamisburg Bulletin, is evidence that the proper method of curing seed leaf tobacco and the current modes of managing sheds in regard to ventilation while tobacco is being cured, are not generally known. It is not unusual to find tobacco growers of wide experience who virtually disagree with regard to the manner in which a tobacco barn should be ventilated during the progress of curing tobacco.

It is known, however, that in a great measure the quality of cured leaf depends upon the manner in which it is cured; hence the subject is an important one and deserves the closest attention from tobacco growers.

Color is an important element in the quality of tobacco, and it is only by proper curing that good colors can be obtained. The inexorable law of fashion at the present time demands rich dark, colored wrappers for covering fine cigars, and it is important, therefore, to know how to obtain them.

It is the general belief that rapid drying tends to produce light colors, and the reverse dark colors; but it is difficult to govern the process that the curing shall be slow and gradual and yet escape the dreaded "pole-sweat." This fact may be found to be usually the case by hanging a plant of tobacco in a damp cellar and one of a corresponding size and in a dry loft, where the one will cure very slowly and the other very rapidly.

When the plants have cured the leave, upon examination will show a marked difference, caused by the time required in curing. Our experiments of this kind have resulted in favor of slow curing as in such cases the leaf has been inevitably in color and fine and tough in texture, while very rapid drying make a leaf light, and uneven in color and harsh and brittle.

Undoubtedly the character of weather while tobacco is growing and curing has much to do with its quality when cured. Experienced tobacco growers have in mind certain seasons when the entire crop of tobacco grown in certain localities cured of bad quality, and they have also known the reverse to be the case.

In other seasons there has been a general complaint of damage to crops from "pole sweat," caused by a term of weather in producing the difficulty.

As it is certain that the weather has very much to do with the quality of curing, artificial means might be invented to regulate the atmosphere so as to avoid the undesirable result now so common. For instance, if it could be found (as it undoubtedly could) that at a certain stage of the thermometer and barometer "pole sweat" in tobacco begins, the difficulty might be easily avoided by providing artificial heat through the curing barn. Or if it could be ascertained that at a certain temperature and stage of the barometer bad colors of leaf were being produced, perhaps by too rapid drying, a means could be adopted to confine the air in the curing barn and so regulate that the difficulty would cease. These are but theories, it is true, but we truly believe that the highest skill in this department of the tobacco business has not as yet been reached. Our growers should aim to improve their crops not only by careful cultivation, but also by proper care in curing. A little inventive genius applied to this part of the work might reveal valuable truths and promote the welfare of growers in general.

Startling Exposure of Frauds in the Oyster Business—Canned and Bulk Oysters Nearly One-Half River Water.

Pittsburg Chronicle.

Wheat Inspector Lindsey reported at length upon the frauds in the Oyster trade in this city. One barrel of genuine oysters he found were often made to do double duty in the hands of retail dealers, who added thickened water to increase the bulk. Lime was sometimes employed. Oysters were more readily and more frequently adulterated than milk. Water increased the size of oysters, at the same time bleaching them and rendering them unfit for food. If given authority he would proceed to the authentic examination of some specimens of adulterated oysters which he had in his possession. The market was flooded with doctored oysters. Those in cans were as often tampered with as those sold by the bucket or tub. Some cans contained but 16 oysters as he had learned by personal experience, and the rest of the six dozen, which should be found in every can, had probably been divided up in a similar proportion. The motive for the fraud, Mr. Lindsey said, was the small profit on the legitimate oyster trade. Sixty thousand gallons of oysters had been disposed of in the two cities in bulk from August 25 to April 5, 1881; 9,500 gallons had been sold by street peddlers, who had added 75 per cent, or 7,125 gallons of water; 5,800 gallons, with 37½ per cent. or 2,175 gallons of water; had been disposed of by retail dealers.

The other 44,700 gallons had passed through the hands of wholesale dealers, who had added to their profits by using 13 per cent., or 5,354 gallons of water. During the period named, 14,664 gallons of water had been palmed off on the oyster-loving portion of the community at $1 per gallon. Between the 1st of September and the 30th of November 13,500 gallons of oysters, with 2,375 gallons of water added, were sold in Pittsburg and Alleghany.

COLORADO RATTLES.

Interesting Advice to Settlers in the Silver State.

From the Youth's Companion.

The kind found on the Colorado plains is mottled and of a grayish tint—so nearly the color of the cactus and the grass (which never takes on a vivid green) that might pass every one and not see it, did it not sound its warning rattle.

The sound of the rattle reminds me of the angry buzzing of a bee imprisoned in hollyhock flower, only it is not so continuous.

It is not safe in this region to go into a garden and put one's hand carelessly among the plants to gather peas or beans, or to pull potato vines, for under just such plants his snakeship delights to take a nap on sultry days.

The reptile creeps into cellars, under boards, and a general watchfulness is always in order.

The harvesters must keep a sharp lookout for this deadly enemy. When stacks of wheat are removed it is no uncommon thing to find snakes under them, or to hear the sharp, defiant rattle as a bunch of grain is tossed on the load. The feelings of the man upon the rack on which the unwelcome visitor has been landed can be imagined.

If an enemy comes too near, the rattle-snake will sound his rattle and hurry for the nearest prairie dog's hole, unless it is actually molested; then it will fight.

In August the bite of this snake is said to be more poisonous than at any other time of the year. Then they are blinded by the shedding of their skins, and as they cannot see, they strike at every sound they hear. This makes them unusually dangerous.

I have seen the head of a rattlesnake completely severed from its body, repeatedly jumping an inch from the ground, at the same time thrusting it fangs from its widely opened mouth.

By many persons it is thought that these serpents dislike water and are not found in low places. They are more numerous on high dry land, but they are found on river bottoms. For some reason the meadow rattlesnakes are much more pugnacious than the other.

Fred W. Newburg, Assistant Secretary of the Ohio State Board of Public Works was arrested Thursday at Columbus on the charge of forgery. He admitted irregularities to the amount of $4,000.

FRANK R. PHISTER

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY EVENING, DEC. 23, 1881.

CONGRESS has adjourned to meet again January 5th.

THE Court of Appeals has taken a recess until January 2nd.

An act to erase the word "white" from the jury laws has passed the Kentucky Legislature.

OFFICIAL reports from Kansas show the farming interests of the state to be in first-class condition.

THE first bill signed by President Arthur, was the one granting Mrs. Garfield the franking privilege.

THE Virginia House of Delegates has passed a bill removing the political disabilities of all persons incurred under the dueling laws.

THE annual report of the Mississippi River Commission has been laid before the Senate. The estimated cost of immediate improvements is $33,000,000.

COL. LOGAN MCKEE, a Kentucky Stalwart, with a "306" record has been to Washington to interview the President on the subject of appointments for his friends. His visit brought about no practical results, although he was graciously received.

It is now asserted that Gen. Arthur disclaims that he authorized or permitted Gen. Grant to name a member of his Cabinet. It is alleged that he claims, and very properly it would seem, that being personally associated with and responsible for his Cabinet, he will select the members himself.

THE Cabinet now stands: Frelinghuysen, Secretary of State; Folger, Secretary of the Treasury; Brewster, Attorney-General; Kirkwood, Secretary of the Interior; Lincoln, Secretary of War; Hunt, Secretary of the Navy, and Howe Postmaster-General—four new men, and three of the Garfield Cabinet.

A BILL has been introduced in Congress by representative McMillan relative to income tax. It provides for an assessment and collection of a three per cent. tax from each person, corporation, banking association, telegraph company or firm doing business in the United States and territories on net incomes above $3,000.

THE Senate Committee on finance, by a majority vote, decided to recommend for passage without amendment, the bill recently introduced by Senator Morrill providing for the appointment of a commission "to investigate the question of tariff and internal revenue laws," and decided to report adversely on the tariff commission bill introduced by Mr. Garland. The Morrill bill was placed in charge of Mr. Bayard to be reported after the holiday recess.

It may be set down as a remarkable fact that much national history has been made during the departing year—more, perhaps, than in any one year of peace within the history of America. There have been in being no less than three Presidential administrations; Cabinets have been made and unmade; the house has changed political complexion; the administrations, while nominally of the same political character, Republican, have, in respects, been the antipodes of each other. One of the more remarkable episodes of this epoch is the relegation to private life of the two recognized leaders of opposing factions, after twenty years of active party strife—Roscoe Conkling and James G. Blaine. They have carried with them into retirement the brains of the party.

HOWARTH'S world renown Hibernica will appear at Washington Opera House, on Friday and Saturday evenings, and at a matinee Saturday afternoon. Do not fail to see it. The Boston Journal says:

At the Tremont Temple, last evening, Howarth's Grand Hibernica was exhibited to a crowded house, and we must say such a pleased audience has not left last night at the close of the entertainment. The pictures of Irish scenery are beautiful, and the acting of the company was in accordance with the scenery.

New Industry.

An industry lately established in this city is the manufacture of cotton stockings by machinery, by the Maysville Knitting Company. The factory is at the corner of Sutton and Third streets, and has been in successful operation for a little over a week. At present there are in use six of the latest and most improved knitting machines and a working force of eight operatives and the weekly production is about fifty dozen pairs of stockings. The company has made a contract with a Western house to take the entire product of the factory at remunerative prices, and it is more than probable the demand will in a short time require additional machinery and an increase of the working force. The stockings made by this firm are of the best quality and must rank high in the market, and the industry become a most important one to this city. It has the best wishes of the community.

A most successful piece of bungoism was played the other day on the steamer Hudson. The boat had landed at Sciotosville a few miles above Portsmouth to discharge a lot of freight, when a stranger rushed hurriedly off the stage plank. A passenger told the officers of the boat that he had taken a hundred dollar bill from him to change and decamped with it. The people of the boat made up a party, and going along with the victimized gave chase, in which they were joined by the Sciotovilans who were at the wharf. After an exciting chase into the woods the confidence man was overhauled by some of the long-legged citizens. After considerable parley, the passenger, who could not afford to remain and prosecute the thief, gave the bungo man $20 to return his $100 bill, which was done, and the villain disappeared in the woods. After they had come back to the steamer, which had awaited their return, the passenger discovered that the bill which had been returned to him was not the original, but a counterfeit. So the bold villain had realized $120 by his ingenuity.

As Daring as His Name-Sake.

Paterson (N. J.) Press.

Napoleon Bonaparte Barney, a machinist employed in the Roger's Locomotive Works at Paterson, was divorced from his wife and she went to her former home near Utica. Mr. Barney, who is about sixty, married a Miss Sutton sixteen years of age. They had one child. In the summer of 1880, Mr. Barney's grown-up son by his first wife, named Willard Barney, came to Paterson from Utica and fell in love with his step mother. Then Mrs. Barney the first came to Paterson and met her former husband. He was surprised to find himself glad to see her. A family council was held the result of which has just come to light. The old man obtained a divorce from his young wife and a day or two ago re-married his first wife. At the same time his son married his father's second wife and became his step-brother's step-father.

A terrible tragedy occurred at Piqua, O., Thursday. Rheinhart Stelzer, about fifty-six years of age, shot his wife and then himself, both fatally. Stelzer was an inmate, a few years ago, of the lunatic asylum at Dayton Ohio, but was released as being cured. Of late he has been somewhat dissipated, and while under the influence of liquor, he stepped up behind his wife, who was sitting in a rocking chair and placing a revolver to the back of her head, fired killing her instantly. He then went to his bedroom, laid down on the bed placed the revolver to his breast and fired three shots, only one of which pierced the chest. He then fired a fourth shot into his brain, which caused death almost instantly.
